and 19, was the assailant, according to E. H. Dutton, of 109 Peachtree street, a carpenter, who stood with Brunson at the time. Three Arrests Made.

Hubert Turner, aged 21, and Lloyd D. Turk, also aged 21, said to have been companions of Owl, were also detained. The three boys did not give their addresses.

Owl and Turner, it is said, fled from the scene, going south on Broad street, and were arrested later on Peters street by Officers Chaffin, Crankshaw and Mosely. Turk was arrested in a Marietta street poolroom immediately after the cutting.

W. H. Giles, with offices at 403 Wesley Memorial building, was standing at the left of Brunson when the newsboy fell. Noticing Owl and Turner breaking to run, it is alleged, he followed them on foot on Broad street. Reaching a point on Peters street near Madison avenue, the pair stopped. Giles telephoned police station and the three officers arrived in the new high-powered police machine and arrested the two youths.

The cutting was the result of a quarrel originated between Brunson and a number of youths, including the three men arrested, while the bunch were having supper at the American Rescue mission, on Capitol avenue.

Brunson is said to have asked Turk to pass some meat, and Turk refused to do so. A quarrel ensued, according to Dutton; Dutton and Brunson left the place, and after gaining the sidewalk, Turk is said to have followed them with a number of other boys and cursed Brunson violently. Brunson whipped Turk for his cursing, according to Dutton.

Claim Owl Borrowed Knife.

After seeing Owl borrow a knife or some other sharp weapon from a boy called "Tex," Brunson and Dutton went to the rescue mission on Marietta street and read a while, officers were told. About 7:30 o'clock, while passing a poolroom near Broad and Marietta streets, they noticed Turk, Owl, Turner and others loitering around.

According to Dutton, he and Brunson stopped to watch the man demonstrate the razor strap preparation. The demonstrator showed how a sharp razor will cut hair.

"It surely cuts, doesn't it?" Dutton said to Brunson.

"You bet it does," Brunson replied. Just then the hand holding the sharp-edged weapon slipped under Brunson's chin and made a quick slash. At Grady hospital it was thought that Brunson was fatally injured when it was discovered that the jugular vein was severed. Infusion of a pint of saline to replace the blood lost by the knife newsboy kept him alive Wednesday night, and physicians stated, following an operation, that he had fighting chance for recovery.

Satterfield Still Free.

Investigation Wednesday developed that Satterfield, alleged slayer of Hart, took refuge in a bakery on Garnett street, near Whitehall street, for a few minutes after the killing which occurred at Whitehall and Trinity avenue, a block from the bakery.

Hart was shot within half an hour after the first meeting with his brother-in-law in ten years.

Satterfield is said to have resented the recent appointment of Hart as administrator of an estate to be inherited by Satterfield's two daughters.

Satterfield appeared at the Hart residence, 43 Trinity avenue, early Tuesday evening, and after an apparently cordial greetings, engaged in a quarrel with him, it is said. Hart left the house and went to a corner soda fountain. Satterfield followed and shot him down, killing him instantly, in the presence of several eyewitnesses.

Edward Blair Dies.

Edward L. Blair, who died from wounds received Monday morning while grappling with a bandit in his yard, is survived by his widow; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Blair; four sons, Charles, Clarence, John and Bill Blair; two sisters, Mrs. Frank Anderson and Mrs. Black, and a brother, John Blair. The body was removed to Harry G. Pool's parlors.

John M. Ricks, aged 23, held as a suspect in the Crawford killing, is said to answer the description of the bandit who held up J. Rubin, a white grocer, and killed the negro when he appeared to offer resistance to the merchant. Ricks was arrested at the city stockade where he has been under treatment for two weeks.

Murder Shrouds Attack.

With his assailant still at large, J. W. Fuller, night watchman for the Tennessee Chemical company, in Inman yards, remained unconscious at Grady hospital Wednesday night from the skull fracture sustained about 1 o'clock in the morning when he was attacked with an iron pipe, beaten into insensibility and robbed. The police have no clue to the robbery and do not know whether one man or more was involved.

Robbery was the only motive for the attack, police say. The aged watchman's pistol and watch were missing when he was discovered at the plant shortly after the attack.

Fuller has been watchman for the concern for nine years. He resides on Tilden street, near Howell station, with his daughters, Mrs. C. E. Smith and Miss Myrtle Fuller. He has three sons living in Atlanta.

The timeclock system at the chemical plant is electrically checked by the American District Telegraph company.

and when returns from Fuller ceased to register at the proper intervals Wednesday night employees of the A. D. T. started an investigation, and found the watchman in a dazed condition at the plant.

and afterwards gave him into the custody of Deputy Sheriff T. M. Landers, of Cobb county. Two Cobb county officers withheld the names of the first two prisoners taken.

Saul is said to have admitted having ridden near Austell with the two men under arrest, and with a fourth party, but declares that he was not involved in the killing of the child.

Claim Car Was Identified.

Saul's car, a 1921 model touring car, was identified as the one which struck the child, it is alleged. A front fender was found crumpled, the officers stated.

Mr. Walker is foreman of the Deatur street station of the Southern Railway company.

Billie Walker, who bore the name of his father, William S. Walker, is survived by his parents; a brother, Owen Walker; and his grandmother, Mrs. Catherine Owen. The body will be brought to Atlanta Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock and taken to the residence of Henry C. Peoples, at 719 Piedmont avenue.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, Rev. W. W. Menninger, rector of All Saint's, will officiate. Burial will follow in West View cemetery.

In and Around Decatur

BY COLONEL JEFFERSON S. MILLS.

Decatur, Ga., December 28.—(Special.)—Max Collector C. H. Talley has turned over to Special Bailiff R. J. Suter for collection between 2,500 and 3,000 $ as against tax defaulters for 1921. The amount involved in these tax amounts to about $52,000. As yet only $1 cost has been accrued against each defaulter, with 10 per cent interest from December 20. However, if taxes are not paid before advertised, costs mount up very rapidly, averaging about $10 for each levy. After the property goes to sale, also, there is 10 per cent penalty added to the 7 per cent, or 17 per cent in all.

Up to recent years it has been the custom for the county to buy in property advertised for taxes and hold the sheriff's deed, reselling the property at the end of the second year. This gave the defaulter another opportunity to meet the bill. But 17 per cent interest has had the effect of bringing out parties in the field who buy, pay all costs and take up the $15 with the sheriff's deed for an investment.

To Audit City Books.

At a called meeting of the city commissioners on Tuesday night, the Audit Company of the South, an Atlanta corporation, was called upon to inquire into and report upon the condition of the city's finances. It is expected that the report will be ready early in January.

Value of Industrial and Technical Work For Children Urged

"One reason for the comparative poverty of the people of the south during the last fifty years has been the lack of conditions in other parts of the country," said Professor W. A. Sutton, in his address Wednesday at the Lewis E. Myers & Co. convention at the Ansley, "is the inadequacy of technical and industrial training for the children in the schools of the south."

Professor Sutton gave the principal address at the southern division convention luncheon, held Wednesday in the pinerom of the Ansley hotel, at 12:30 o'clock. He sounded the keynote of the convention in his speech, "The Special Meaning of Education to the South."

Federation's executive committee. The only change made Wednesday night in the personnel of that committee was the election of Mr. Cunningham in place of E. O. McClain.

J. A. Miller was elected the federation's delegate to the next annual convention of the American Federation of Labor; Carl Karston was elected alternate.

Delegates Are Named.

Nine delegates to the next annual convention of the Georgia Federation of Labor, to be held in Macon next April, also were elected. They were Coroner Paul Donehue, who received the largest number of votes; G. B. Gramlin, L. A. Marquardt, William Van Houten, Mrs. M. E. Sewell, Walter C. Caraway, W. E. Wells, E. L. Quinn and William Pollard.

At the opening of the meeting, Robert E. Gann mentioned that the federation's executive committee confer with City Attorney Mayson relative to securing the passage of an ordinance by council prohibiting municipal employees from engaging in trades when off duty. He stated that they are doing so now, in opposition to union labor. The motion was adopted.

A letter also was read from Miss Lucy A. Johnson, a teacher, which said that the Fulton County Teachers' association has been unable to continue its organization because of official opposition. "It seems unfortunate to have disbanded," the letter states, "but they felt they could not succeed with so much opposition from those in authority." The letter was referred to the federation's committee on organization.

A communication from the Butcher Workers' union, of Chicago, which is on a strike, was read also. The letter stated that the employers held that $15 is a sufficient amount for a packer to support a family and on that the strike was called as a result. It also claimed that the employers are using 20,000 negro strikebreakers and that they are trying to incite race riots. It ended by asking the federation's help and co-operation. Robert Gann then moved that the federation's executive committee communicate with Georgia's congressmen and senators and ask them to investigate conditions which caused the strike and also the strike status. The motion was passed. The letter also declared that the "industrial relations plan" has been detrimental to the employers in the packing industry, that by this plan the reduction in wages had been agreed upon, without conferring with the employees.

Support Rent-Book Plan.

The federation's committee, named recently to confer with W. A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, in a report at Wednesday night's meeting, asserted that the committee recommend that the federation give Superintendent Sutton full support in his rent-book plan, and declared the committee will cause a fund to be started, which in three or four years will mean free textbooks for the local public school children.

The only argument Wednesday night arose when the question of electing a delegate to the annual convention of the Southern Labor congress came before the meeting. William Pollard, an electrical worker, denounced the congress, declaring that the federation should completely snub the congress and have nothing more to do with it. He also declared that its advertisements were formulaed at the Southern Bell Telephone office in Atlanta, and that the money paid by organized labor had been used to defeat the telephone strike which occurred here several years ago.

A resolution, that the federation inquire of the secretary of the congress as to its financial status was passed without a dissenting vote.

The next meeting of the federation will be held on the second Wednesday of January.

Man Comes to Senses On Way to Hospital; Remembers no Mishap

M. W. Jones, a machinist living at 105 Spring street, was taken to Grady hospital suffering from a fractured right leg and bruises about his body Wednesday night.

Mr. Jones states that he does not know how he came by his injuries. The last thing he could remember, he says, before finding himself in a government ambulance was that he was walking out Peachtree road.

ROMM IS ELECTED LEADER OF JEWISH PROGRESSIVE CLUB

Mendel Romm was elected president of the Jewish Progressive club Wednesday night at the club's semi-annual banquet in the club rooms at 270 South Pryor street. Besides the election of officers, the meeting was featured by the burning of the club's mortgage, the speech of Herman Weinberg, retiring president, and the reports of the various committees, which showed phenomenal progress of the club during the last six months.

Other officers elected were Sol Levin, vice president; H. A. Blondheim, treasurer, and Max Mendel, secretary. The house, entertainment and athletic committees were named also.

The mortgage was burned by two little girls, Miss Rosalind Weinberg, daughter of the retiring president, and Miss Evelyn Abelman, daughter of the vice chairman of the house committee. In appreciation for services, Max Mendel, secretary of the club for five terms, was presented by the club with a gold watch. The committee reports were made by Mendel Romm, Sidney Hertzberg and Aaron Lichtenstein.

DEBS GIVEN GREAT WELCOME AT HOME

Terre Haute, Ind., December 28.—Gene Debs is home. He landed here, his home town, Wednesday night to find 25,000 people, socialists, radicals, republicans, democrats, black, white and yellow, cheering him.

Radicals of ultra-liberal tendencies waved red flags and cheered him. Citizens to whom this man, lately released from prison, was an old friend of no political conviction, waved American flags and cheered him.

Debs was overcome by his reception. He tried to talk at the station and could not. So he was rushed by a conglomeration of men, some on a truck and it was this way, followed by thousands of political admirers, and political enemies, that he came to his old home.

There the great crowd, blocking the streets for four blocks, demanded a speech.

Silence Crowd.

The giant socialist leader stood on his porch and raised a finger. The crowd was silent.

He then tipped into the house and the crowd continued to be silent for it knew that he had gone to meet the wife from whom he had been separated for the two years and nine months of his sentence at Atlanta.

He was gone for several minutes and none of the crowd dared to come back. No one followed him into the house.

Then he came out and the crowd broke into wild cheers. It sang "America," "The Internationale," "The Internationale," and a variety of radical songs in one breath, overwhelming the bands trying to follow them.

Debs smiled and spoke briefly. Much of his speech was lost in the cheers that punctuated each sentence. One note predominated his speech.

Is Not Through.

"I'm not through," he said several times. "I will continue to devote my life to the poor and to the prisoners in the prisons who are, many of them, as innocent of wrongdoing as I am."

He said hundreds of old friends here tonight and many of you do not agree with me politically. But I am filled with love for you all and I know that in coming out to welcome me home tonight that you did so because you reciprocate my feeling and a man cannot ask more than that.

Mayor Charles W. Hunter, republican, led the cheering that followed this remark.

The crowd was so dense around the station that two policemen, old friends of Debs, escorted him from the train.

Not out of the hands of the police yet, chuckled the socialist leader, grasping each by the hand.

A police escort also accompanied the truck on the three-block parade to the home.

PUBLISHING COMPANY OFFICER IS DEAD

Nashville, Tenn., December 28.—Charles R. Morrow, secretary and treasurer of the Tennessee Publishing company, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, died today after an extended illness.

Former President Wilson Observes 65th Birthday

Washington, December 28.—Former President Wilson was deluged with telegrams from all over the world today—his sixty-fifth birthday. It was said the messages were of a congratulatory nature on the improvement in his health.

In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Wilson went for an automobile ride. This evening they had as guests for dinner Miss Margaret Wilson, the former president's daughter, and several other members of the family.

Several of the more intimate friends of Mr. Wilson called at his home during the day to extend their greetings. It was said that the former president was in excellent spirits and keenly enjoyed the messages of good-will received from his friends throughout the world.

WOMEN OBSERVE WILSON'S BIRTHDAY.

New York, December 28.—Fifty women from various cities observed the birth of Woodrow Wilson at a luncheon here today. They were addressed by Frank L. Poik, former under-secretary of state; Henry Morgenthau, one-time ambassador to Turkey; and Miss Virginia Potter.

Mrs. William G. McArdoo, daughter of the former president, was an honorary guest.

The campaign to raise $1,000,000 for awards of the Woodrow Wilson foundation "for meritorious service to democracy, public welfare, liberal thought or peace through justice," was discussed.

It was decided to start after contribution January 15.

DEMOCRATIC BODY SENDS GREETING.

Nashville, Tenn., December 28.—The democratic state committee at its session this morning, authorized the sending of the following telegram of felicitations to Woodrow Wilson: "Hon. Woodrow Wilson, Washington, D. C.:

"The democratic executive committee of Tennessee and hundreds of leading democrats and hundreds of leading citizens of this state, met to pay honor to Hon. Cordell Hull, chairman of the national committee, send hearty greetings and felicitations on the occasion of your 65th anniversary with sincerest wishes that you may enjoy many more such days—that you gain in health and strength as you are in love and affection in the hearts of your countrymen."

Big Year Planned by Junior Chamber

Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., prominent young business man, who was elected president of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, predicted in a statement Wednesday afternoon that the organization will make itself felt even more in the civic life of Atlanta during 1922 than it did in 1921.

The progress of the junior chamber during its first year was remarkable, he said. "The work it did proves that the enthusiasm and the energy of the young business men of the city can be made a substantial force for the general good."

"I feel very greatly honored by the office which has been given me, for during the last year under the leadership of Mr. Westmoreland the junior chamber has accomplished much and become an outstanding organization here. It has done its part in the building of a bigger and better Atlanta."

"I feel confident that the good work of last year will be continued in 1922 and perhaps surpassed."

Mr. Oberdorfer has been active in the activities of the American Legion, and local clubs. He is in the insurance business in the Grant building.

The other officers elected were Palmer Blackburn, first vice president; Roy LeCraw, second vice president; Richard W. Courts, Jr., third vice president, and Richard W. Courts, Jr., treasurer. Kenneth S. Hayes and M. M. O'Sullivan were appointed to fill vacancies which had occurred in the board of directors.

President Oberdorfer announced Wednesday that he will appoint standing committees soon and will make recommendations relative to 1922 activities at the next meeting of the chamber. A tentative program and an operating budget for 1922 will also be drawn up and submitted to the board of directors.

At a meeting of the chamber on January 9 the question of raising the yearly dues of the organization to $10 will be discussed. The organization now has more than 1,000 members, who have paid their 1921 dues.

BEAUTY PARLOR SPECIALIST TALKS AT BURCH TRIAL

Los Angeles, December 28.—Mrs. Louise M. Wilson, beauty parlor specialist, was called to the stand today when the trial of Arthur C. Burch, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, was resumed today in the superior court. Her testimony attacked that of Mrs. Mary Baillif concerning conversation between the latter and Mrs. Madeline Oberlin, who is indicted with Burch.

The witness testimony broke in on a series of questions which have been giving evidence calculated to establish that Burch is insane and therefore irresponsible.

Mrs. Wilson testified that she was present when Mrs. Baillif and Mrs. Oberlin had a conversation at the beauty parlor that was introduced by the state through the medium of Mrs. Baillif. The conversation, according to a statement by Mrs. Oberlin, that she felt something was going to happen to Belton. Mrs. Wilson said there was no such statement from Mrs. Oberlin, or any one else as she recalled it.

Woman Shoots La Grange Man In Front of Home

LaGrange, Ga., December 28.—(Special.)—George Littlefield, a local taxi driver, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Rosa Gray at her home one mile from Abbottsford, this evening. Littlefield was carrying passengers to Wedowee, Ala., and stopped at the home of the woman.

The two were standing in conversation in the front yard when suddenly Miss Gray is said to have drawn a pistol and fired once. The bullet entered Littlefield's abdomen, producing a wound which will probably prove fatal.

Deputy Sheriff A. O. Wilson went to the scene of the shooting and arrested Miss Gray, bringing her to LaGrange, where she was placed in jail. Statements of Littlefield and the woman are conflicting, the former saying he was shot without provocation, while she claims to have shot in self-defense.

would force other powers to build. In the words of the official report of the discussion, "he did not desire at this time, to discuss details, but he wished to say that an agreement for the expansion of armament was not under consideration."

Balfour, in discussing the French position, said "it must be acknowledged that this constitutes a somewhat singular contribution to the maintenance of peace."

The French, in submitting their acceptance of the capital ship ratio, even made reservations having to do with replacements and the duration of the naval agreement.

Balfour characterized this as a "serious interference with the new holiday" but added that it was only a small part of the anxiety and disappointment created in his mind.

Official Report.

Here is the way the official report sets forth Balfour's position on submarines:

"They (the French) have now come forward with a great building program of submarines and auxiliary craft. He (Balfour) was perfectly unable to conceive how that could be regarded as a defensive policy—it was perfectly obvious that the proposed 90,000 tons of submarines were intended to destroy commerce. It was perfectly clear that if at our very gates a fleet of 90,000 tons of submarines was to be constructed, no limitation of any kind on auxiliary vessels capable of dealing with submarines could be admitted by the government which he represented."

"Balfour's motive had now been given in a most formal manner that this fleet was to be built on the shores nearest to Britain and it would necessarily be a very great menace to her."

"He had no doubt, if the occasion ever arose that Britain would be equal to it, but it was on condition that we reserved the full right of Britain to build any auxiliary craft which she considered necessary to deal with the situation."

M. Sarraut declared he could not allow "certain observations" of Balfour to go unanswered.

Solely for Defense.

He declared the French decision was based solely upon the defense requirements at home and for her colonies, and pointed out the great preponderance of the fleets of other nations as indicating France was not seeking to compete with them through any apprehensions.

"We have no desire to destroy merchant vessels," he continued, "as Mr. Balfour has said. We have formally declared to the contrary here and there, and we expect not later than yesterday in the French senate."

"We object to having it believed or said that the creation by France of a defensive weapon involving a certain tonnage of submarines could be considered as a menace to any of her friends."

Balfour in further reply said that "he did not yield to M. Sarraut in his conviction that the good feeling existing between his own country and their great ally across the channel would remain unshaken through all the changes which time might bring."

It was difficult to believe, he said, that in time of stress France would not use her submarine fleet for commerce destruction.

Italy Disappointed.

Senator Schanzer, speaking for Italy, expressed disappointment that an agreement on auxiliary craft had not been reached. Vice-Secretary of Foreign Affairs Hanahara, speaking for Japan, likewise expressed disappointment and said the Japanese desire was to adhere to the original Hughes proposal.

Thus the debate ended and the submarine problem was thrown into the discard. It will be reopened only on the initiative of France.

AID FOR EX-SERVICE MEN AND FARMERS

long to dim the glory of the eight years' unparalleled achievement of the national democracy. The work of constructive, patriotic statesmanship, accomplished by that party will stand out in clearer perspective during the coming years. The democratic party emerged from that almost super-human ordeal with flag untarnished, with doctrines sound and pure, with a record of undying fame, and with cheerful hope for the future.

"Fundamental principles cannot be assassinated and a great historic record cannot long be falsified."

"If wholesale breach of solemn and unqualified promises to the people constituted a statutory crime," Judge Hull said, "every reaction republican leader, state and national, would, under a plea of guilty, be in the custody of the law tonight."

"The disappointed farmer now reads the account of his industrial ruin by the light of his burning corn. Millions of laborers are frequenting the soup houses, bread lines and the auction block as in the days of chattel slavery, burdened and told him that it was crucified on the cross of politics."

Commerce Slumps.

Under republican leadership, the chairman said, American foreign commerce "has slumped six billion dollars in the last twelve months," and "an almost vertical slump in prices in America of from 30 to 50 per cent, and in the purchasing power of farm products of 65 per cent quickly followed."

For two years prior to March, 1921, he said, the only remedy offered by republican leaders for post-war conditions was "an antiquated high tariff and the archaic doctrine of commercial isolation."

Development of a "sound public opinion that will give intelligent and active support to legislation and progress in enactment of wise remedial legislation" was declared by the speaker "at this time, to be in sad and urgent need."

He said, "of more education and more co-operation on the part of individuals and business with respect to our public affairs. An intelligent understanding and whole-hearted co-operation on their part would soon improve government 100 per cent."

Up-to-Date Program.

"The democratic party is the only political organization," Judge Hanahara contended, "which today offers a comprehensive, up-to-date national program of policies and principles."

The party, he said, still holds to its belief in a tariff for revenue only, for economy in governmental expenditures, for "equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

"The recent democratic administration has not yet received credit for its many great accomplishments," he said. "But whatever its defamers may say in the future, even the school child will soon learn that in 1912 our national wealth was $187,000,000,000, and in 1920, when the republican administration was chosen, it was $330,000,000,000; in 1912 our foreign trade was $3,850,000,000, and in 1920 it was $13,500,000,000. A year after the war the value of manufactured goods exported in one month equaled the amount exported in an entire year under Taft's administration."

BUSINESS BETTER, STATE MERCHANTS

Signs of improving business conditions; a return to normal in the future, and a real justification for optimism were seen by Atlanta merchants in the business done Tuesday compared with the business done on the corresponding day a year ago, as well as from a review of the record for the last twelve months.

Several Atlanta merchants stated that it was the best day's business in their experience, and from it foresee a rapid return toward normal conditions. From every indication, the buying public is plainly satisfied with the level to which prices have fallen.

Chamber Leaders Will Be Elected At Meeting Today

Officers of the Atlanta chamber of commerce for the year 1922 will be elected Thursday afternoon when the 1921 and 1922 boards of directors meet at 12:30 o'clock in the directors' room.

It is an innovation for the chamber of commerce directors to elect officers before the first of January, since the new board members do not take office until 1922. However, President Aschcraft thought it would be for the best interests of the organization that 1922 begin with its officers in full power, and for that reason the 1922 board will elect officers at its meeting.

The present officers are Lee Ashcraft, president; R. B. Troutman, R. K. Hambo and W. O. Foote, vice presidents; H. W. Davis, treasurer, and C. E. Robertson, secretary. Those officers, with the exception of the secretary, are elected by the board of directors. The secretary is named by the executive committee of the chamber, which consists of the president and the three vice presidents.

The assistant secretaries are named by the secretary, this act being subject to the approval of the executive committee.

The sixteen members of the 1922 board of directors who will choose officers Thursday are R. C. Alston, J. V. Boehm, William H. Adler, Mrs. Samuel Inman, H. B. Kennedy, R. K. Rambo, A. C. Newell, Lee Ashcraft, Forrest Adams, J. P. Allen, B. Davidson, Frank Inman, A. S. Adams and E. R. Black.

The directors just named, with the exception of seven, also are members of the 1921 board. Mrs. Samuel Inman, who is one of the seven, is the first woman ever elected to membership on the chamber's board.

Besides those 16 members, there are four ex-officio members, Mayor Key, representing the city of Atlanta; Paul S. Etheridge, representing the county; Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., representing the junior chamber of commerce; and Miss Laura Smith, representing the women's department of the chamber.

During the 40 years of history of the Atlanta chamber of commerce a number of presidents have served more than one term. President Lee Ashcraft has said definitely, however, that he would not accept re-election, and no other names have yet been suggested for the place.

Nevertheless, he has still another year on the board of directors, having been elected a year ago to serve on the 1921 and 1922 boards. R. K. Rambo, a 1st vice president, will also serve on the 1922 board. An officer can, however, be chosen from the entire personnel of the chamber, which numbers more than 3,000.

Tom J. Terrell, of Little Rock, Ark., former secretary of the senate, former secretary of state, and last year a candidate for governor, who is a big act in the city, is expected to be a speaker, was in Atlanta yesterday on a business mission, and called on a number of democratic leaders.

His theory is that every boy and girl is entitled to state aid in obtaining an education, if the parents are not able to provide. He declares that he is to be done in his state by working on the state's debt, and that he would like to use as a loan fund to the ambitious youth of his commonwealth, which they could repay in after life.

T. J. Ritch's Funeral To Be Held Thursday; Burial in Hollywood

Funeral services for Thomas Jefferson Ritch, Confederate veteran, who died at his home, 97 Elbridge drive, Wednesday, will be held at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of St. Paul's Methodist church, 303 Grant street. Interment will follow in Hollywood cemetery, where the John R. Wilkinson Masonic lodge will conduct services at the graveside. Mr. Ritch was 81 years old.

His death resulted from a fall in which he struck his head against the fire grate in his room Tuesday. Physicians stated that a stroke of paralysis caused the fall.

Mr. Ritch had been making his home here with his son, Charles E. Ritch, for ten years. He was a native of Upstate, near Columbus, and lived there before coming to Atlanta. During the civil war he was a lieutenant in the Fifty-fourth Georgia regiment.

Surviving Mr. Ritch are his widow, three daughters, Mrs. D. E. Boswell of Atlanta; Mrs. J. F. Ingram, of Columbus, and Mrs. R. S. Snellings, of Upstate; four sons, Charles E. Ritch, of Atlanta; H. J. Ritch, of Upstate; J. P. Ritch, of Baltimore, Md., and C. H. Ritch, of DeLand, Fla., and thirty-four grandchildren.

HARRY YORK HEADS CAPITAL CITY LODGE

At the ninth annual communication of Capital City lodge No. 1, F. & A. M., Harry York was elected worshipful master; E. E. Williams, senior warden; M. F. Dowdy, junior warden; Jno. T. McDonnell, treasurer; J. G. Henry, secretary; J. J. Tomkins, senior deacon; Fred Boyd, junior deacon; A. O. Hauschenberg, senior steward; Jno. M. Owen, junior steward; Rev. W. J. Debardeleben, chaplain.

A creditable report by the finance committee was read. The lodge has made wonderful progress for the year. R. E. Drennon, the retiring master, was presented with a handsome watch as a token of esteem.

FINE WEATHER TODAY, STATES FORECASTER

Fine weather for the next few days, with a warmer temperature, is the weather forecast for the last week in the year 1921.

Wednesday morning the thermometer registered 40 degrees, according to the weather bureau, and a rise of about five degrees was predicted for Thursday. Friday will probably be still warmer and decidedly pleasant. Washington predicts cloudy and warmer weather for Thursday.

To prevent a watch being pulled from a pocket by a thief an inventor has patented a rubber cover with projecting points that impede its removal.

RECEIVER ASKED FOR KU KLUX KLAN

Judge John T. Pendleton, of Fulton superior court, Wednesday granted a temporary injunction restraining the Ku Klux Klan, its officers or agents, from paying out funds except for ordinary expenses, not including salaries, and from banishing from the order any of the petitioners, who ask the court to appoint a receiver for all property, funds, documents and records of the Klan. Hearing on the petition was set for January 28.

The petition for injunction and receivership was filed by W. H. Terrell, former imperial attorney of the order, now counsel for the insurgent faction of the Klan, and 174 other klansmen from all parts of the country.

The receivership was asked on the ground that the affairs of the order have been mismanaged, its funds improperly extended and that members of the Klan, who have attempted to improve conditions by proceedings within the order, have been made to have them banished.

The petition further seeks the removal of Edward Young Clarke, imperial wizard of the Klan, and Elizabeth Tyler, head of the propagation department, both of whom are made co-defendants to the suit.

Mr. Terrell went in person to the home of Colonel William J. Simmons, head of the Klan, and notified him of the proceedings. The imperial wizard refused to make any statement, it was said.

Statement by Simmons

Wednesday night, Colonel William Joseph Simmons, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, in discussing the suit, said: "The charge in the petition that any funds of the organization have been misused by any official is not true and the charge that any one or more officials of the organization have domination of the organization is also not true."

"The supreme committee of the organization, with the imperial wizard at their head, is in absolute charge of the machine. The statement that the organization is losing membership or that it is disintegrating is absolutely false."

New Year's Party Of Yaarab Temple Is an Innovation

Yaarab Temple has set a number of precedents in the city by terminating the year with another innovation that will prove highly enjoyable, not only to the nobles and their ladies, but to all master Masons and their ladies, the occasion being the big entertainment and snow dance to be held in the Auditorium New Year's Eve.

The dance will be the biggest and most spectacular New Year's Eve party ever held in Atlanta, introducing oriental splendor in the entertainment section and a touch of winter in the decorations. The night will be a night of revelry, and the occasion being the big entertainment and snow dance to be held in the Auditorium New Year's Eve.

Yaarab's million-dollar band is down on the program for a concert that will reveal to the Shriners and Masons of this section why it is always chosen as one of the concert bands at imperial council meetings, while the grand scene entrance of the new potentate, W. Byrne Gibson, and his divan will give many a view of things usually seen only by Shriners.

Make Kirkwood Separate Ward, Urges Carpenter

Alderman J. L. Carpenter, of the eleventh ward, will urge a plan in city council to suspend further action toward a revision of ward lines, annex Kirkwood temporarily to the eleventh ward, and ask authority of the Georgia legislature next summer to make of Kirkwood a separate ward.

The alderman stated Wednesday that the people are perfectly satisfied with the ward lines as they are, that the proposed extensive changes would cause no end of confusion, and that to permit Kirkwood to become a ward to itself would be distinctly a violation of the spirit of the merger.

"Kirkwood people have been to me," he said, "protesting against the proposal that would cause Kirkwood to lose its identity by being added to one of the present wards, if recommendations of the majority of council's special committee appointed to study and report on ward line revision should be followed by the council."

"Leave the ward lines like they are. They are where the people want them. Let Kirkwood come into the eleventh ward temporarily. Then, next June, get the legislature to designate Kirkwood as a new ward. That's what Kirkwood wants, and that's what a majority of the citizens of Atlanta want to see done."

Councilman J. R. Nutting, chairman of the committee appointed to draw a new map of ward lines, has announced that the committee will hold a meeting Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. Some changes not threshed out at previous sessions will be gone over. A number of council members have served notice that they will fight a report calling for any change of the present boundaries.

ALLEGED DRUG DEALER FREED IN $700 BOND

Carl Harbin, one of the 24 persons who have been arrested in the recent drive against violators of the Harrison narcotic act, was released under $700 bond after a hearing in the office of United States Commissioner Colquh Carter, Wednesday. Harbin pleaded not guilty to the charge of being implicated in the alleged violation of the narcotic law.

Tuesday morning Dr. J. M. Neil and J. F. Wilson were given hearings and were released on bond. Neil gave bond for $1,000 and Wilson for $500.

Federal inspectors announced that the drive will be kept up until all violators of the drug law in this city are dealt with.

SCHOOL NOW PLANNED FOR CARPENTERS HERE

A school for carpenters is being planned by the local carpenters' union, to enable unskilled workmen to become adept at their trade, it was announced at a joint meeting of local unions 253 and 1294 held Tuesday night.

The present wage scale of 70 cents an hour will be maintained until May 1, when it is believed an increase will be sought. A meeting to consider consolidation of all the carpenters' locals in Atlanta will be held Thursday night.

Atlantan Is Told Of Vain Attempt To Aid Refugees

How he tried in vain to rescue his parents from the cold and hunger existing among the Jewish refugees in Odessa and other parts of eastern Europe is told in a letter from Morris Gest, the noted theatrical producer, that has just been received by Charles Emerson Cook, playwright, critic and theatrical producer of the firm of Comstock & Gest, who is spending his holidays here with Colonel P. N. Snook, the father of Mrs. Cook, who was known on the stage as Gladys Hanson.

"My own brother, Samuel, with his wife and baby," writes Mr. Gest, "managed to escape from Kishineff and are now safe in Warsaw. But their flight was a thrilling one and the hardships they endured were almost beyond description. They were smuggled across the border on Poland, but not until Samuel had been thrice arrested by Russian authorities and thrice condemned to be shot. Their escape was little less than miraculous."

"My sister and husband escaped from Odessa, but they were unable to persuade my parents to undertake the dangerous journey. For 27 days they traveled on foot with only such food as they could gather along the route and they finally arrived in Lemberg almost without clothes and nearly starved to death. Their case is typical of many thousands."

"My parents are still in Odessa. I was unable to reach them although I got to the border town of Regina, where the Russian guards could be plainly seen walking their beats on the other side of the river. I was only four hours journey from Odessa and it almost drove me mad to think that I was so near and yet unable to see my parents. I was able to send a special Russian courier with letters and money for them, and I hope that ultimately I may be able to bring them out of Russia."

Side Talks

WHY ARE THEY RUDE?

In a letter that came to me from a woman in a distant city the other day was this passage:

"I wish you could tell me why are women who are striving for some form of civic improvement treated with such scant courtesy by the public servants to whom they must go with their requests?"

"This is my experience. I have been working for the past few weeks to get the school nurse and health work, which most cities have had for years, established in our schools. This is surely a thing which most enlightened people would regard as an essential reform. It directly concerns parents and it does not seem to me to be an unwomanly thing for me to have done. And yet half the men whom I approached gave me about as much courtesy and consideration as they would have given to a blind beggar, although in every instance I asked for only five minutes to present our case and was careful not to overstay it."

He sat and let her stand.

"One man, the cotton leader type, a wealthy young member of a family high in the social order, after grudgingly making an appointment, kept me waiting nearly half an hour, did not offer me a seat, and wrote at his desk all the time I was talking. And he is paid to look out for the interests of his district."

"Of course there were some men who were considerate, courteous and helpful, but they were the minority. I got what I went after, but I had to put up with unbelievable rudeness. Why do you think politicians treat women this way?"

And I been asked that ten years ago I should have promptly said: "Because women have not the vote. Once they become voters, the men's attitude will be very different."

Like Two Bits of Life's Picture

That answer, naturally, has been taken from me. And I was at a loss what to answer. And then in that strange way in which two bits of life's puzzle often fit together, the day after I got that letter I read an editorial on a political contest which is to take place in one of our large cities. Here are some extracts from it:

"O—O—is one of the few men in politics who believes that the coming of women into politics is a fine thing. He actually sees in the women's vote a tremendous advance in political thinking, and one that warms his heart. Not one man in a hundred, politician or plain citizen, indorses such sentiments. Men in general will never admit women to political companionship until they are clubbed into it. If women only knew the antagonism there is among men to their political and industrial advance they would get the shock of their lives. However, the men are safe for years to come because they will take women some time to wake up to where they stand. When they do, there will be trouble in store."

I suppose that answers my correspondent's question. If it is true—a few defeats brought about by the women's vote are not enough to bring on the same consideration the man voter gets. More she never does ask for, and I hope she never does. Tomorrow—A Thrilling Thought About Clothes.

WHAT'S WHAT

By Helen Decie

Every year we learn to live more and more the French custom of sending Happy New Year greetings to our friends, although we have not yet reached the worry-saving way of presenting gifts only to children at Christmas, and of limiting our holiday adult remembrances to New Year cards, as is done in France, where Christmas is a religious holiday and New Year's a secular holiday.

The sending of New Year cards, calendars and booklets is not limited to one day; the year is still shiny-new.

when it is a week or even a month old. So if there are any friends to whom we send no Christmas tokens, especially friends who have had a troublesome old year, we have plenty of time now to send them our best wishes for a Happy New Year, either by a written letter greeting card, or both. Mrs. Waters Is Honor Guest

Mrs. J. C. Waters who is spending the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. Ben Griffin, at the Ponce de Leon, was honor guest at the luncheon given by Mrs. John E. Murphy yesterday at her home on Peachtree street, the guests including the members of the family.

An elegant filet lace cover was arranged on the table and adorning the center was a silver basket holding polkaettes. Silver candelabra held red candles and monogram cards of the hostess marked the guests' places.

Mrs. Murphy was gowned in blue horsehair crepe fashioned in graceful lines.

Mrs. Gattins wore a gown of black georgette crepe, effectively beaded.

Tea for Bride-Elect.

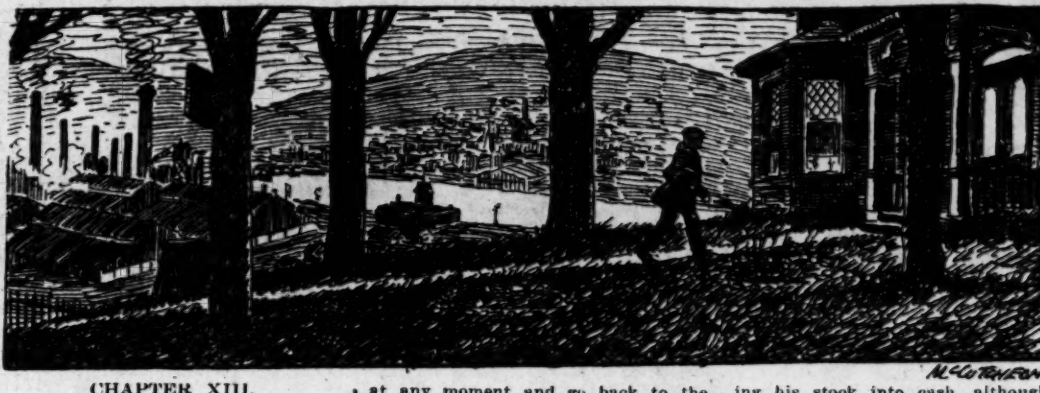

Miss Willie Maude Hall, a lovely bride-elect, was the guest of honor at an afternoon tea Wednesday afternoon, given by her sister, Mrs. Walter Cain.

Polkaettes combined with greenery were used as decorations throughout the lovely home. A miniature Christmas tree formed the centerpiece on the attractive tea table. Red candles and tapers were used.

Receiving with Mrs. Cain and Miss Hall was their mother, Mrs. Ella Ayers Hall.

CHAPTER XIII.

Harry L. Rasher, hair clipped close up to the top of his head, where a heavy black thatch remained, began as a truck driver in the Lannard steel mills. His work took him to the various departments of the plant and at times across the river to Somerville City and its coal yards.

At night, dog tired, he returned to a laborers' boarding house. In common with the other day workers, a lunch was put up for him each morning by an overworked and harassed landlady in whom, for some strange reason, the milk of human kindness had not entirely soured.

Three of his fellow boarders were Americans; the rest were of various races broadly classified as "hunkies." The latter spoke little or no English. They appeared at their meals, silent and tired, and then disappeared to bed or to their twelve-hour night shift. An air of sullen resignation marked them at all times. In their eyes Rasher could see no trace of sunlight.

By degrees he became acquainted with those who spoke English. He noticed that they did not inquire into his past. The fact that he had arrived in town in a battered Ford, which he later sold for $85, was particularly a matter not to be closely inquired into.

He himself talked little until he had acquired some of the tricks of language common to his associates, and thus avoided emphasizing the superiority of his education.

The knowledge that he could quit at any moment and go back to the refinements and luxuries of civilization made it possible for him to endure with cheerfulness what others endured resentfully from grim necessity.

During the brief times of leisure between work and sleep he frequented a smoky, ill-smelling pool room. Here, stimulated by poisonous mixtures, two men talked, and Rasher began to learn something of their grievances. He contrasted their lot with that of the Lannards in New York, negotiating for a title for their daughter. No wonder they did not live in Adamant, where the sights would tend to cloud their gaiety!

After Rasher had been at work for two weeks he addressed in a scrawling, feminine hand a number of soiled envelopes, which he gave to the trustee of his estate. "When you communicate with me, use one of these," he instructed, and asked for a full account of the next directors' meeting of the Lannard Steel company. Mr. Lannard had been informed that the 40,000 shares, although left to a relative in the west, would continue to be voted by the trustee, as formerly—an arrangement that was satisfactory to him.

The first envelope to return contained the information that the trustee was on the trail of a block of stock now held by a count who was engaged to Miss Lannard. The count had made a secret visit to the plant and was alarmed at the labor conditions found there. He was considering the advisability of converting his stock into cash, although a price had not yet been agreed upon.

At the end of his third week Harry L. Rasher wrote his first report for James Stabo, manager of the mills, and took it one evening to the home of his secretary, Miss Brook.

The house was an old-fashioned brick one, up on the hill overlooking the great mills, sprawling, black and grimy, along the river's edge. Along the brick walk, under venerable trees now bare of leaves, were the remnants of flower beds which were doubtless careful patches of color in summer. The place bore the look of a faded gentility common to old houses whose original occupants have been replaced by others in much more moderate circumstances.

Rasher was admitted by a sweet faced elderly woman with tired eyes and shorn into the parlor. The furniture dated back many years, the carpets were worn but clean, and a fresh neatness marked the simple white curtains. Two old-fashioned family portraits hung on the wall. As Rasher waited he was conscious of a keen eagerness to see again the girl whose face had struck him as being the one ray of sunshine in the entire bleak plant.

A photograph on the mantel arrested Rasher's attention. It was one of Mrs. Lannard taken years ago. He was regarding it curiously when Miss Brook entered the room.

As she recognized him her eyes lit with friendly interest. He was sure there was contentment in them as she received his report.

Birthday Party For Master Falvey.

Mrs. Esmond Falvey entertained at a children's party yesterday afternoon at her home on Peachtree place, the occasion celebrating the second birthday of her young son, Thomas Esmond, Jr.

Christmas evergreens and polkaettes decorated the living room and sun parlor, where games were played by the children. A white crepe garland tied with a red bow, held the favors, which were drawn by a red ribbon, each little guest being favored with a suitable souvenir of the occasion.

In the dining room the lace-covered table had for the central decoration a large birthday cake, iced in white and richly decorated with red roses. Red and white ribbons fell from each corner arranged as a border on the top of the cake, and two red candles adorned the top.

Four crystal candelabras, holding unshaded red candles, and arranged as a border around the table, were garlands of smilax. Red and white mantles and candles were carried out by the color motifs. Ballons of all colors were suspended from the chandelier, and were presented as favors.

On the buffet were tall silver vases holding calla lilies and narcissi, while vases of red roses were placed on the mantle.

Mrs. Falvey was gowned in brown lace combined with orange chiffon. The handsome little host wore a suit of white satin.

Assisting in receiving were Mrs. Albert Collier, Mrs. Arthur Crowe, Mrs. J. J. Chambers and Mrs. O. D. Gorman, Jr.

Those invited were Dorothy High Petet, Mary Barill, Betty Yott, Harry Morris, Betty Johnson, Chapman, Margarette Cavin, Harriet Milam, Anne Wallace Coppedge, Margaret Paule, Patricia Poole, Helen Clark, Charlotte Galloway, Jack Charters, Bolling Jones, Jr., George Ford, Edward Walker, Ned Mellett, John Taylor, Hugh Roberts, Louis Ingram, Jr., Edward Jones, Jr., George Gresham, Jr., Bob Simmonds, Jr., Russell Bridges, Jr., Dan MacIntyre, Jr.

Miss Anderson Is Entertained.

A delightful gathering of the very young set was assembled at the home of little Miss Bessie Baxter, on Linwood avenue, when she entertained her friends for a party at a game of rummy, in honor of her guest, Miss Marie Anderson, of Wilson, N. C.

Lovely prizes were given to the lucky winners of the games, and favors were distributed from a Christmas tree.

Miss Baxter and Miss Anderson both wore brown velvet frocks. The handsome little hostess, in entertaining her guests by her mother, Mrs. Julian Baxter; her aunt, Miss Bessie Baxter, and Mrs. Selby Anderson, of Wilson, N. C., the mother of the honor guest.

Miss Merritt Is Honored.

Mrs. C. R. Merritt entertained in her home on West Peachtree street in honor of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Merritt, who is spending the holidays at home.

A book was given to the winner of the top score and the consolation was a novelty.

The home was bright with the reds and greens of the season.

Sixteen members of the college set were invited to meet the guest of honor.

To Mrs. Meegan.

Mrs. Robert R. Otis will entertain at luncheon today in compliment to Mrs. James F. Meegan, of Washington, D. C., the guest of Miss Adina Flynn.

DRESS

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Jenny of Paris Gives Women a Chance to Answer a Question of How to Look Well With a High-Necked Coat Over a Low-Necked Blouse.

There were many things from the house of Jenny in Paris which appealed to American taste. One was the invention of a black cravat to hide that bare space at the neck between the oblong opening of the blouse and the V-shaped opening of the jacket and to keep the cloth of the coat from drawing a hard and coarse line against the bare back of the neck.

No woman has ceased to worry over this ugly juxtaposition of cloth jacket and thin blouse. They neglected the only remedy in sight which was to abandon it. But woman will not wear a high collar on her bodice or blouse, which shows good sense and she will not put a white or cream collar over the rough cloth collar of her jacket, which does not show good sense. Now here comes along an invention which may be accepted, for it does the work of the bead or crystal necklace which has been worn with afternoon frocks for the same purpose as the cravat is intended to serve, which is to put a long line against an oblong one to carry off with grace the structural lines of the neck, chin and shoulders. Every dress and art student knows the difficulty of manipulating the place where the head is set on the shoulders. Nature does not always do a pretty job there. Art must help.

The new fashion exploited by Jenny of Paris is to use the color of the skirt or frock for the cravat even if she does not use the same fabric.

The tailored suits for spring which are the background of several small fashions are not lacking in interest. We are building the short jacket sometimes rippling decidedly below the waistline, which is a newer line than the recent straight coat. It may have been measured by an engineer. Buttons are lacking in the new coats. The idea is to let the fronts open as far as the waistline where they are caught by a barrette or link buttons. The latter are quite smart wherever they are used; sometimes they catch the long loose sleeves together at the wrist to make them more graceful and less inconvenient. Buttons are again introduced as trimming which is a fashion of debatable excellence. Like the cravat, it is a matter of taste. It is a matter of taste whether the substance, interfere with the sweep of line necessary to good dressing. One feels that dressmakers must know this, but they must know it in order to introduce ideas that catch trade.

The new jacket by Jeanne Lanvin which gives a new twist to the head like a frock has many admirers. It opens to the waistline, but no further. Outside of this departure, it is conventional in appearance. It is usually built in finely striped suiting which may be worn in the streets—our manufacturers will determine this—but at present it is intended for southern resort wear.

LITTLE CAKES FOR COLD DAYS.

LITTLE cakes are more attractive than big ones for luncheon, very often. On cold winter days fresh little cakes with canned fruit or with cream and nuts make a delicious luncheon dessert. And they are infinitely less trouble to prepare.

Any good cake batter may be used, with the addition of various spices, chestnuts, raisins, dates or citron from time to time to vary the character of the cake.

The simplest sort of frosting may be used, just confectioners' sugar mixed with milk or with beaten white of egg.

Or, you need use no frosting, but may sprinkle the cakes with sugar. Sometimes you may place a nut meal in a little white or chocolate frosting. Sometimes you may sprinkle the cakes, before baking them, with granulated sugar or with cranberries, and cocoa mixed. This cooks into a most interesting surface.

Tea Cakes. Cream one cup of butter with two cups of sugar, add a cup of milk, two cups of flour, and half a cup of corn starch stirred with two teaspoons of cream tartar and one of soda. Flavor to taste, bake in party-pans, and sprinkle with powdered sugar or spread with any preferred frosting.

Nut Cakes. Chop coarsely a cup of pecans, walnuts or hazelnuts. Add a cup of sugar, the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, and sufficient flour to roll. Roll thin, cut into rounds, and bake in a slow oven for 15 minutes. (Copyright, 1921, for The Constitution.)

With many gowns she uses black silk or cloth for the cravats regardless of the frock color. The long streamer is folded over on itself after the manner of a riding stock, the two ends lie to fall below the waistline. As winter weather is here the cloth of this cravat can be replaced by fur. Ermine, seal, black coney or fine pony skin would look very well against the bare neck and make a far more novel tailored suit by Jenny showing a black cloth cravat worn with red crepe de chine blouse. Red linen handkerchief falls from pocket.

LITTLE cakes are more attractive than big ones for luncheon, very often. On cold winter days fresh little cakes with canned fruit or with cream and nuts make a delicious luncheon dessert. And they are infinitely less trouble to prepare.

Any good cake batter may be used, with the addition of various spices, chestnuts, raisins, dates or citron from time to time to vary the character of the cake.

The simplest sort of frosting may be used, just confectioners' sugar mixed with milk or with beaten white of egg.

Or, you need use no frosting, but may sprinkle the cakes with sugar. Sometimes you may place a nut meal in a little white or chocolate frosting. Sometimes you may sprinkle the cakes, before baking them, with granulated sugar or with cranberries, and cocoa mixed. This cooks into a most interesting surface.

The Mortgaged Wife By Mildred Barbour

Who's Who in the Story.

Jeanne (Jane) Dare, beautiful, clever, but poor, resolves to stake everything to achieve a wealthy marriage, and, after raising all the money she can, mortgages her savings and borrowings, aided unwillingly by Henry Harrison, her childhood sweetheart and a hopeless suitor for her hand, comes to New York, where she believes eligible men are to be found, and establishes herself as a woman of wealth and fashion at one of the smartest hotels, where she meets Richard Canby, a wealthy man about town, who is attracted by her beauty, and introduces her into his set in which are Adele Parkinson, a vivacious young widow, former flame of Canby, who immediately befriends Jeanne, and Victor Barstow, young, handsome, debonaire, only son of a multimillionaire, whom Jeanne marks as her prey. Barstow is instantly attracted and comes to Jeanne, when a famous Italian violinist.

Signor Bonicetti, smitten with Jeanne's beauty, plays for her guests. Harrison arrives unexpectedly with the news that the property mortgage Jeanne had depended on to pay her increasing bills is worthless, but, impelled by his hopeless love for her, he buys it with his life-long savings.

Installment No. 13. "AT HIS OLD TRICKS, I SEE!" When Harrison bid Jeanne good-night in front of the house where she was to dine, it was arranged that she should postpone his departure until the following midnight in order that the transfer of her property could be duly executed and the money deposited to her account before he returned to Iowa.

Jeanne had a full day planned for the morning. There was some necessary shopping to do in preparation for the Forbes' week-end party, greatly augmented since she had learned that Victor Barstow was to be one of the guests. Jeanne had instantly decided, on becoming acquainted with this fact, that the wonderful pale blue brocade dinner gown at Madame Julie's, which she had successfully resisted thus far, would have to be purchased. The money she was to get from Harrison on the transfer of her property eased her conscience considerably on this point.

She had a luncheon party on, too, and a dinner-dance to which Canby was taking her. In view of what Harrison was doing, and his postponed departure for the west, she felt rather guilty at not giving him any other than a hasty invitation to breakfast.

"But don't dare come around until 11," she laughed. "This is New York, remember, not Iowa." He accepted eagerly. "Just promise me you'll have ham and eggs or some other man-sized meal," he qualified. "I'll be lunch for me and I don't cotton much to that French breakfast idea of coffee and a finger roll."

When she came to the white house the turkey trot was in its infancy. Under her leadership the capital set took up the modern dances and then the secretary of the treasury became a handy person on the waltz floor. She is interested in the Boy Scout movement and usually puts in an appearance at the big encampments.

with me to the party." "I don't!" he replied with a wry smile. "I'd be like a bull in a china shop with all your fine friends."

ALLIANCE WITH AN ENEMY Jeanne entered the iron-grilled doorway at which a uniformed personage had been patiently waiting with open portal since the arrival of her cab.

A maid relieved her of her wrap in the elaborately appointed dressing room, and she touched her face mechanically with the powder puff the girl offered, gave a last glance at her reflection in the mirror and went down to the drawing room.

As she had expected, it was a stupid dinner company who had assembled; but she comforted herself that it was correct and socially unimpeachable. "I believe I have the honor," said Selby North, offering his arm when dinner was announced.

He was a short, bald-headed man of the "old bean" type. Thereby, by sparse, sandy hair in a fringe around the edge of his collar and a clipped, tawny mustache on his upper lip. Far from romantic in appearance, he was worth enough money to incite the constant angling of unattached young ladies. Vain angling, it was, too, for Selby North represented the type of idle, dissipated, and non-marrying clubman which infests New York.

He knew something more or less derogatory about everyone and the fact that most of his knowledge was false did not restrain him from passing it on to willing ears. Nevertheless, he was worth enough money to incite the constant angling of unattached young ladies. Vain angling, it was, too, for Selby North represented the type of idle, dissipated, and non-marrying clubman which infests New York.

He smiled down at her with a bored cynicism which failed to hide his gratification at a tribute from a beautiful woman. "You find me more acceptable than your late cavalier, I take it?" he remarked as they were seated at the table.

Jeanne wrinkled her forehead. "Whom do you mean?" "The gentleman of the violet suit with whom I saw you five. My cab drew up just as yours was leaving. My, what a lingering good-bye!" he chaffed.

EXPLAINING HENRY Jeanne went cold. Of all people in the world, she would rather anyone but Selby North had seen her arrival in Harrison's company. What a fool she had been to suggest his coming with her! It had never occurred to her that other guests might be arriving simultaneously, even at that late hour.

"Oh that man!" she managed a laugh and a shrug of her lovely shoulders. "He is the superintendent of a ranch I own out west. He came east unexpectedly to see me on business—I have a good offer for a slice of it—and he had to catch the midnight train back. So I went over the business with him coming up in the car."

Selby North looked at her closely. Jeanne wondered if her imagination had evoked a credible story. "So you are the fortunate winner of a ranch? Did you, may I ask, ever spend any time on the ranch?"

"Why yes, of course. One summer shortly after I returned from France. There was so much to be looked after in regard to my inheritance."

"Ah!" North wagged his bald head. "Why do you say 'ah' like that?" asked Jeanne.

"I can understand now, my dear, the beatific look upon the young man's face as he gazed at his lovely emerald. The charm in love with you!" Jeanne crimsoned.

"Mr. North, you mustn't say such a thing! Really! Why he—wouldn't think of such impertinence!"

"Love is always impertinent, child! Especially love directed toward a beautiful girl. Why even I dare to raise my eyes to you!" he murmured with a look of mock devotion.

Jeanne laughed, relieved that the conversation was taking another tack. NOT SO EASY "I saw a young friend of mine yesterday whom you must meet," Victor Barstow! You've heard of him, of course?"

Jeanne's eyelids lowered demurely. "Yes, he had tea with me this afternoon."

North stared frankly. "So! You knew him in France perhaps?" Jeanne shook her head.

"I met him at Mr. Canby's dinner last night."

North pursed his thin lips. "Young Barstow didn't let much grow under his feet, did he? At his old tricks, I see!"

Jeanne's heart missed a beat. It was unbecomingly true, but she wanted to hear the worst. "Is he a—lad-killer?" she asked with well-assumed indifference, dissecting a sweetbread.

North laughed. Jeanne thought it reminded her of a goat. "Is he? Well, rather! Girls all fall for him like walnuts after the first frost. With the Barstow millions, who wouldn't? But," he amended, "I must say Vic's a personable enough young fellow to attract women even without his gilded background. And how many flirtations he's had—oh Lord!"

The zest went out of Jeanne's appetite. She pushed her entrée aside. So! It was not going to be as easy as she had expected! The game was only half begun!

BEAUTY CHATS

EXCESSIVE PERSPIRATION.

Several women have written to me recently asking why they should suffer from excessive perspiration in cold weather. In most cases, I can see from the letters that the cause is nothing but nervousness.

Very few people know that nerves have this curious effect upon the pores of the skin, though, of course, it is common knowledge that a nervous shock or a long nervous strain will bring out a cold and clammy moisture over the face and hands. I know one woman of a slightly emotional temperament who cannot wear gloves during a concert or an opera because her hands get hot and wringing wet. This is simply due to a nervous reaction on her part, and it is quite common. People, who have very nervous temperaments are always bothered with perspiration of the hands or under the arms.

I know of one excellent formula which will lessen excessive perspiration, and which will neutralize any disagreeable odors. It is perfectly simple and harmless and is made as follows:

Epsom salts 3 oz.
Wheat bran 1-2 pint
Water 4 pints

Mix this and let stand over night, then strain and add four ounces of the best quality bay rum.

You can use this as often as you wish. It will stimulate the skin and make it healthier and thus do away with a tendency toward excessive perspiration. It would be harmful to stop the natural amount of perspiration, so I never advise the patent formula that comes for this.

J. H. H.—If you are 4 feet 10 inches high and weigh 120 pounds you are, at least, 15 pounds overweight. Your flesh is soft because you have too much fat on your body. The best thing for you to do is to diet and to exercise as much as possible until you have reduced. Then instead of too much soft flesh you will have firm muscle and you will feel very much better.

Jane L.—If your complexion is bad, taking two cakes of yeast a day for a week will show very much improvement. You will have to keep on with this or any other treatment for several weeks and then you will have to go on for several weeks after that before the complexion is perfect. It is impossible to make right in a short time any condition that has been going wrong for a long time.

The fine lines under the eyes are usually called laughing wrinkles and do not necessarily mean old age. Sometimes even children have them. If you will massage them with a flesh-building cold cream you will be able to make them seem less prominent. Tomorrow—Another Chat on Face Steaming.

SCHOOL CLOSURES FOR HOLIDAYS WITH BIG PARTY

Mrs. C. D. Crawley's school in West End closed December 22, for the Christmas holidays, with a delightful entertainment.

The first part of the program was filled with interesting songs, plays and songs, until jolly old Santa Claus appeared to distribute the many beautiful gifts from a well-laden tree.

After some fun, fortune-telling and serving of delicious refreshments, etc., two cakes, that were left over, were sold to the highest bidder, and the money, together with that realized from the fortune-tellers, put into the contribution box to aid in making some destitute home more cheerful during the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Crawley desires to thank her patrons for their cheerful co-operation with her in the management of their children, and for the encouraging manifestations of their appreciation of the school. Much of the success of the entertainment was due to Mrs. Youlu, the efficient teacher of expression. The exercises of this school will be resumed Monday, January 2, 1922.

and Mrs. J. Fuld, who is in charge of the kitchen, is preparing for a record crowd. The public is cordially invited.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. The Constitution's Weekly Detective Story

Seven Suppers of Andrea Korust

A PETER RUFF STORY
BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
(Copyright, 1921, for The Constitution)

A silence followed—breathless—the silence before the bursting of the storm. Mr. Von Tassen was the name of the American statesman, and the man who rose slowly from his place by his host's side was the exact double of the man who stood now upon the threshold, gazing in upon the room. The expression of the two alone was different. The newcomer was seriously angry, and looked it. The man Mr. Von Tassen was very much at ease. It was he who broke the silence, and his voice was curiously free from all trace of emotion. He was looking his double over with an air of professional interest.

"On the whole," he said, calmly, "very good. A little stouter, I perceive, and the eyebrows a trifle too regular. Of course, when you make faces at me like that, it is hard to judge of the expression. I can only say that I did the best I could."

"Who the devil are you, masquerading in my name?" the newcomer demanded, with emphasis. "This man is an impostor!" he added, turning to Andrea Korust. "What is he doing at your table?"

Andrea leaned forward and his face was an evil thing to look upon. "Who are you?" he asked out.

The man Mr. Von Tassen turned away for a moment and stooped down. The trick has been done often enough upon the stage, often in less time, but seldom with more effect. The wonderful wig disappeared, the spectacles, the lines in the face, the make-up of diabolical cleverness. With his back to the wall and his fingers playing with something in his pocket, Peter, Baron de Groot, smiled upon his host.

"Since you insist upon knowing—" the Baron de Groot, at your service!" he announced.

Andrea Korust was, for the moment, speechless. One of the women shrieked. The real Mr. Von Tassen looked around in a dazed way.

"Will some one be good enough to enlighten me as to the meaning of this?" he begged. "Is it a roast? If so, I only want to catch on. Let me see to the joke, if there is one. If not, I should like a few words of explanation from you, sir," he added, addressing Peter.

"Presently," the latter replied. "In the meantime, let me persuade you that I am not the only impostor here."

He seized a glass of water and dashed it in the face of Mr. Von Tassen. What emerged was a good deal like the shy Maurice Korust, who accompanied his brother at the music hall, but whose distaste for these gatherings at Andrea's continual lament. The Baron de Groot stepped back once more against the wall. His host was certainly looking dangerous. Mademoiselle Celeste was leaning forward, staring through the room with distended eyes. Around the table every head was turned towards the center of the disturbance. It was Peter again who spoke.

"Let me suggest, Andrea Korust," he said, "that you send your guests—those who are not immediately interested in this affair—into the next room. I will offer Mr. Von Tassen then the explanation to which he is entitled."

Andrea Korust staggered to his feet. The man's nerve had failed. He was asking all over. He pointed to the music room.

"If you would be so good, ladies and gentlemen," he begged. "We will follow you immediately."

They went with obvious reluctance. All their eyes seemed focused upon Peter. He bore their scrutiny with calm cheerfulness. For a moment he feared Korust, but that moment had passed. A servant, obeying his master's gesture, pulled back the curtains after the departing group. The four men were alone.

"Mr. Von Tassen," Peter said, easily, "you are a man who loves adventures. Tonight you experience a new sort of one. Over in your great country, such methods are laughed at as the cheap device of sensation mongers. Nevertheless, they exist. Tonight is a proof that they exist."

"Get on to the facts, sir," the American admonished. "You've got to explain to me what you mean by passing yourself off as Thomas Von Tassen, before you leave this room."

Peter bowed.

"With much pleasure, Mr. Von Tassen," he declared. "For your information, I might tell you that you are not the only person in whose guise I have figured. In fact, I have had quite a busy week. I have been—let me see—I have been Monsieur le Marquis de Beau Kneel on the night when our shy friend, Maurice Korust, was playing the part of General Fiederson. I have also been His Grace the Duke of Rosshire when my friend Maurice here was introduced to me as Francois Defaye, known by name to me as one of the greatest writers on naval matters. A little awkward about the figure his grace, but otherwise I think that I should have passed muster wherever he was known. I have also passed as Sir William Laureston, on the evening when my rival artist here sang the praises of imperial England."

KID SCANLON

BY H. C. WHITWER
(Copyright, 1921, for The Constitution)

Next Week, "The Gift Supreme," by George A. England.

A little electric buzzer makes good while Honest Dan is ravin' away, and Dan, gettin' white, grabs the Kid by the arm and begs him to come to the rescue.

"Jump in that cabinet there!" he whispers to him. "And when this dame asks if you're Henry, say yes, and tell her the real Marc Anthony is the guy with the blonde hair, and he's now at the City hospital. That's all you got to say, and—"

He shows the Kid back of the cabinet and me back of a curtain just as Cleopatra blows in with her daughter. Honest Dan tells them to be seated right, because the professor has just got the spirit of her husband where's he's ready to talk to the reporters.

"Now!" whispers Dan to the stout dame, "speak quick!"

"Is that you, Henry?" squeals Cleopatra in a tremblin' voice.

There's a rustle in the cabinet and then this comes out over the top:

"This guy is crooked, Henry, and careless. He will take you for your beautiful, bulgin' bankroll and—"

"Merciful heavens!" yells the name. "A sign! Henry, shall I go back?"

"Back is right!" says the voice.

"These guys is cheap crooks and they ain't no Marc Anthony!"

The lights go out and Honest Dan comes to, rushin' over the stout dame with a million alibis tryin' to be first out of his mouth. I beat it around to the back, but the professor has gone somewhere else while the dame was fair to medium.

"You have deceived me, you wretch!" screams the stout dame.

"You have—"

"That's as far as she got, because right in the middle of it she pulls a faint, and daughter eases her to the floor. The kid hops out of the cabinet and grabs Honest Dan.

"Beat it, you rat," hawks Scanlon, "before I commit mayhem!"

From the way Honest Dan went out of that room, he must have passed Samoa the first hour.

CHAP. VII.—Life Is Real!

The kid and me is out to Film City again, and we're sittin' in Duke's office one mornin' when walks Edmund De Vronde. Edmund has caused more salesladies to take their pens in hand than any other actor in the world.

"Hello, Cutey!" says the Kid, who liked De Vronde and carboic acid the same way.

"I've come to ask a favor," says De Vronde. "What is it?" we ask him. "That is—practically nothing. My dresser—the silly idiot—tendered me his resignation this mornin'."

"Well, what's all this gotta do with me?" asks Duke. "I can't be bothered diggin' up valets to see that you got plenty of fresh vanilla cold cream every mornin', and that they's ample talcum on valets to see that you got plenty of powder on the chifferin'!"

"I have already secured a man," interrupts De Vronde. "He happens to be a—friend of mine. The poor fellow is desperately in need of work. So if you'll kindly telegraph the fare to this address," goes on De Vronde, "I'll be obliged."

"With that he blows."

A week later, me and the Kid is standin' near the entrance to Film City talkin' to Miss Vincent, when a young fellow blows in through the gates and walks up to us.

"He ain't thousands miles from bein' in good-lookin', and his chin is well cut and square, like at one time he'd been willin' to hustle for his wants and gettin' 'em once he got 'em, but that time ain't now!"

"Pardon me," he says, takin' off his hat. "Where can I find Mister De Vronde?"

The Kid puts his hand on his arm and swings him around.

"You'll prob'ly find him over behind the street scene in Venice," he tells him. "If he ain't there, look around the Sahara desert for him—know him when you see him?"

The other guy looks at us for a minute like he thinks he's bein' kidded. Then he pulls a slow, tired grin. "I think so," he says. "Thanks."

When he walks away, I turns to Miss Vincent.

"That's prob'ly Cutey De Vronde's new 'guardien'," I says. "I guess he's—"

"He doesn't look like a valet," says Miss Vincent, kinda doubtful.

"THAT LITTLE GAME"

By B. Link

The next mornin' it turns out that I can guess like a rabbit can run. The new entry on the payroll borers a match from me, and durin' the tete-a-tete that followed, I find out that the kid is a real one. As far as the world in general and America in particular is concerned, it could be of George G. Mud. Durin' the lifetime of twenty-nine years he's been on earth, he's tried his hand at everything from bankin' to bartenderin', and so far the only thing he's been a success at is bein' a failure.

"How did you happen to meet this big stiff De Vronde?" says I.

Adams gets pale for a second and clears his throat.

"I'm working for him," he says slowly. "Like he's thinkin' over each word before lettin' it go, 'and I don't care to discuss him."

At just that minute, De Vronde, Miss Vincent, the Kid and another dame come rollin' up in Miss Vincent's twelve-cylinder garage-mechanic's friend. De Vronde hops out and walks over to us, wavin' his cane and frownin'.

"Look here!" he bawls at Adams. "I thought I told you to be at the east gate with my duster and goggles. You've kept me waitin' half an hour, while you're gossipin' around! Really, if you're going to start this way, I shall have to get another man. Look sharp, now, no excuses!"

"Here's where the fair Edmund gets his and gets it good!" hisses Duke in my ear, lookin' at Adams.

"I'm very sorry," says Adams, suddenly. "I should have remembered."

And without another word or look, he exits.

"Yellah!" snorts the Kid.

"No spine!" sneers Miss Vincent.

"Nice-looking boy—who is he?" asks the other dame, lookin' after him.

When they're gone, Duke turns to me and grins.

"Did you notice that strange dame which was with Miss Vincent in that car just now? Well," he says, "this dame is Miss Dorothy Devine. When her father died last year, she became an orphan."

"Well, that's tough," I says. "Me and the Kid will kick in any amount in reason and—"

"Hold!" said Eddie. "Her dear old father only left her a pittance of fifty thousand a year and two-thirds control of the company we're all workin' for out here."

"Accordin' to Dorothy, all the pictures we put out are rotten. Our heroes and villains are plucked alive from dime novels and is everything but true to life. Our heroines be long in fairy tales and oughta be let stay there. She claims that no beautiful girl with more money than the United States must walk for the handsome lumberjack, and that no guy who couldn't do nothin' better than punch cows would become boss of the ranch through love of the owner's daughter. All that stuff's bunk, she says. Her dope is that a real man would boost himself to the top, girl or no girl, and the woman never lived which could put a man over, if he didn't have the pep himself. Miss Devine wants us to put on a movie that she committed herself, and, if we do, we'll be the laughin' stock of the world, and Big Bend. It's got everything in it but a hero, a heroine, a villain, action and love interest. It's about as hot as one of them educational thrillers like 'Natives Makin' Panama hats in Peoria' would be. A couple of these would put the company on the blink, and I lose a ten-cent contract at ample money, a year!"

"No, I ain't gonna quit! I'm gonna show Miss Dorothy Devine that as a judge of movin' pictures, she's a swell-lookin' girl. I like these tough games, a guy feels so good all over when he wins 'em. She's startin' with all the cards—money, looks and, what counts more, she's just about the Big Boss here now. All I got is one good card and that's only a jack—Jack Adams, to be exact—and I'm gonna beat her with him! I'm gonna make a sportin' proposition to Miss Dorothy Devine."

"What's the bet?" I says. "I may take some of it myself."

"The bet is this," he tells me. "Here's this boy Adams, who, bein' De Vronde's valet, is undisputed low man in Film City. He's disgusted with life, he ain't got the ambition of a sleepin' alligator, or nerve enough to speak harshly to himself. All right! If Miss Devine will follow my orders for a couple of weeks without Adams knowin' who or what she is, I claim that bird will make good! All that guy needs is a reason for tryin', and she can make herself it."

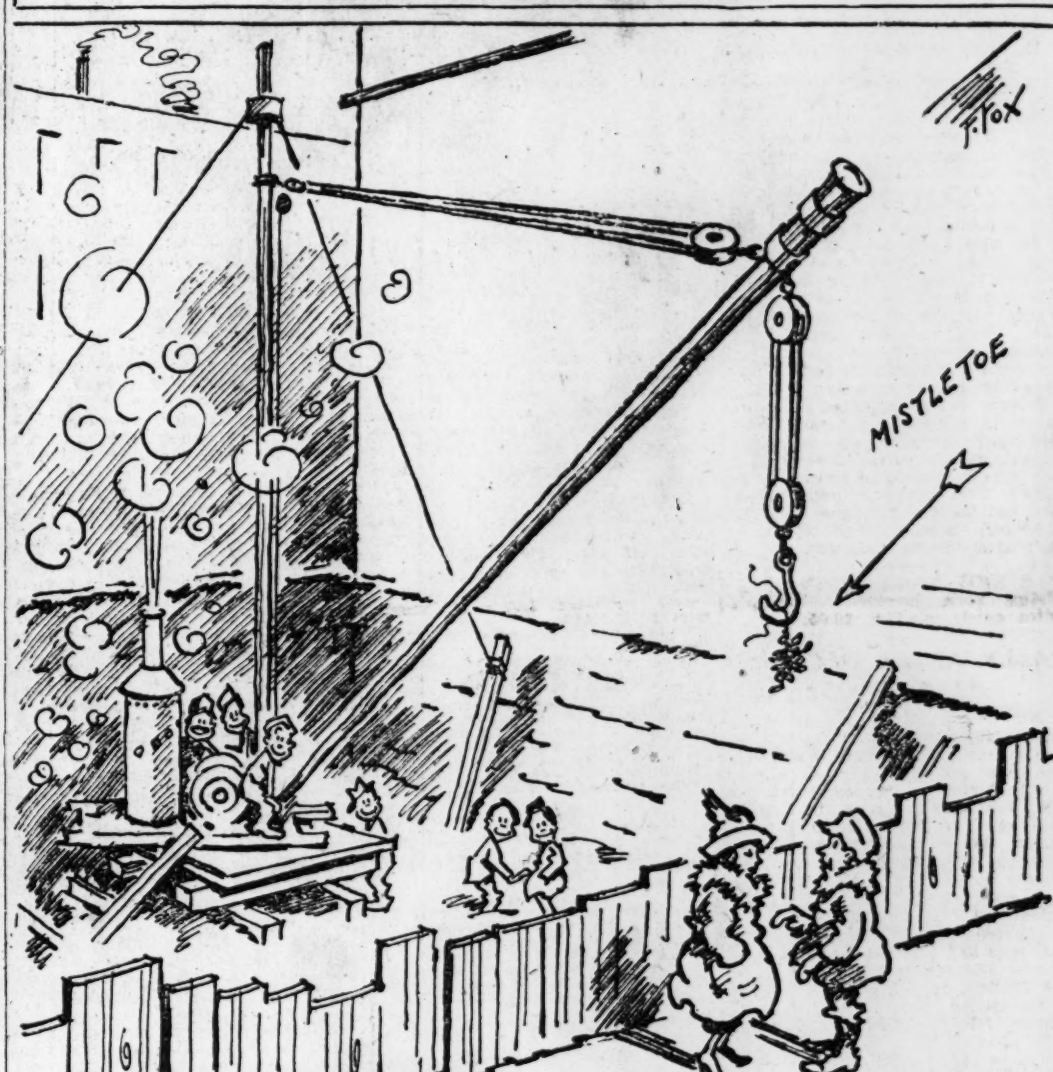

"You don't expect a dame like that to make love to a guy that cleans De Vronde's shoes, do you?" I asks him. "You must of been a terrible trial teacher when you went to school!" he snorts. "No—I don't want her to make love to him."

"I want her to cut him dead, because he's a valet, and let him know that's the reason. Who put Adams over? Eve! All right, I'm gonna win this thing up and let it go. I'll take the best scenes from the last six pictures we put out, and puke Adams and Miss Devine play 'em out, without either of 'em knowin' it. They oughta be a villain, and I'm shy one just now, but I'll lay six to five that one will turn up."

"Look here!" I says. "Suppose Miss Devine should fall for this Adams guy for real! Did you ever figure that?"

"Yes," he snorts. "And suppose the Pacific ocean is made outa root beer!"

LOVE WILL FIND A WAY

THE YOUNG CONSTRUCTION ENGINEER WHO FIGURED OUT A WAY TO GET HIS SWEETIE UNDER THE MISTLETOE WHEN SHE CAME AROUND TO SEE HIM ON THE JOB.

I guess Miss Devine must of been a sport, because Duke starts his stunts off the next day. She promised to give Adams a month to show signs of life and to do exactly as Duke tells her. Adams ain't to be told a thing about it, and Miss Devine giggles herself sick over how she's gonna show Duke the difference between real life and the movies. They put up a thousand bucks apiece. The first action come off when Miss Devine and Adams meets in the "Sahara Desert" set.

"Good morning," pipes Adams, bowin' and raisin' his hat.

"I beg your pardon," comes back Miss Devine, drawin' herself up and presentin' him with a glance that's colder than a dollar's worth of ice.

"I—I said good morning!" stammers Adams, kinda flustered.

"That will do!" she cuts him off. "I'm not in the habit of arguing with servants. You may go."

Sweet cookie!

The poor kid looks like he'd stopped one with his chin and for the first time since I'd seen him, he straightens up with his head, white face fairly quiverin'. I thought he was ready for a peach of a come-back, but he fooled me. He walks off without a word.

Miss Devine laughs like a kid with a new rattle and snaps her fingers after him.

The next day Duke is directin' a scene in a big thriller they're puttin' on and Miss Devine is appearin' in it as a super at his orders. She's wearin' enough jewels to free Ireland and she looked better than 1912 would look to Germany. Adams is standin' on one side with his arms full of De Vronde's different changes. Duke looks at Miss Devine for a minute and then raises his voice.

"Say—you!"

"What's the matter, can't you hear? You made that exit wrong three times runnin', d'ye think we get this film for nothin'? What d'ye mean by comin' here and ruinin' this scene on me, eh? You wanna be a movie star, they tell me—well, you got the same chance that I have of bein' made Sultan of Turkey! If you can cut, I'm King of Shantung! Why—"

Miss Devine gasps and looks more than ever like a rose, by turnin' a deep and becomin' shade of red. Nobody pays any attention to the thing. They'd all heard it a million times before, when Duke was rehearsin' supers.

Nobody but Adams!

He drops all of De Vronde's clothes right on the floor, and I thought the fair Edmund would faint away dead! Adams walks right through the camera men up to Duke and him around while he's still bawlin' out Miss Devine.

"That's enough!" he snarls, white to the ears. "One more word to this lady, and I'll knock you down! You hound—you wouldn't dare use that language to a man!"

Duke's eyes sparkle, but he looks Adams over coldly and sneers.

Adams hesitates a minute, and then he looks like on second thoughts he's scared at what he's done. He mumbles somethin' and walks right out the picture, not even turnin' when De Vronde squeaks at him for walkin' over his silk duster which he'd thrown on the floor.

"That's all for now, ladies and gentlemen!" pipes Duke suddenly, turnin' to the bunch. "I'll shoot the rest of this tomorrow."

They all blow out except Miss Devine. Duke looks at her, rubbin' his hands together and grinnin'.

"All right!" she smiles back. "All honors! What will I do next?"

New York, December 28.—A continuation of the recent buying movement sent the price of cotton up to 10.05, the cotton market here during today's early trading. There was increased realizing above the 10-cent level, however, and prices eased off later, with March selling back to 18.70 and closing at 18.74. The general market closed barely steady net 8 points lower to 1 point higher.

The opening was somewhat irregular owing to the circulation of January notices, estimated at about 3,500 bales. They caused a little scattering liquidation of near months, but after starting 1 point lower to 8 points higher, the market soon turned firmer owing to the steadiness of Liverpool, continued favorable reports from the goods trade and the apparent absence of any selling pressure from the south.

For a time trading was active and a broadening cotton demand was reported on the advance, which carried January up to 19.05 and May to 18.54, or about 20 to 24 points net higher.

This made an advance of over 2 cents per pound from the low prices touched during the middle of the month, however, and evidently attracted realizing.

There also was some scattered selling for a reaction on a belief that the technical position of the market had weakened or that further advances were likely to be increased. Hedge selling, prices eased off in consequence, January selling down to 18.81 and May to 18.25 in the late trading, or about 4 to 5 points net lower. Business was comparatively quiet on the decline and the selling was attributed chiefly to local, Wall Street and western accounts.

Private cables from a quiet market in Liverpool, but said prices were higher on rather more encouraging business prospects. Houses with both Liverpool and continental connections were among the early buyers here, but the demand from both the trade and shorts tapered off materially after the forenoon advance.

RALLY AFTER DECLINE AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, December 28.—The quick stopping of January notices, combined with a better Liverpool than day, put the price of cotton sharply higher in the early trading, but after advances of 12 to 20 points much realizing came from traders on the long side, the upward movement was less pronounced and reactions brought about. At one time selling was heavy enough to put the trading months 3 to 12 points under the close of yesterday, but in the late trading there was less pressure and reactions recovered so that the close was 2 points up to 2 points down on the session. After rising to 18.21 January fell off to 17.90 and closed at 17.85.

Notices for 500 bales were issued but did not circulate at all. They were stopped before the market opened and several brokerage firms stated that they had instructions to stop any number of notices. During the reaction from the first advance the market had a steady enough under the steady, the steady improvement in reports of continued improvement in the spot demand, telegrams from Dallas saying that spinners were calling cotton in that market and were even taking interest in short sales, something that had been considered a drug on the market.

Reports received here from dry goods markets of the country were considered highly encouraging, causing buying for long accounts on the recessions.

WILSON'S FAMOUS STEEL BOX

It held the secret records of the Big Four in Paris.

Documents and letters seen only by Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando.

Minutes carefully guarded from public view by the Government chiefs.

Personal memoranda signed by the great leaders of the Peace Conference.

Confidential reports from statesmen and military men.

Europe's secret treaties which have been mysteries for two generations.

Notes on politics as it seethed under the surface of news at home and abroad.

The historian to whom Woodrow Wilson entrusted all these private records has spent two years writing the first complete story of the Paris negotiations—a story that lays bare the motives and schemes in the background of the Peace Conference

THE CONSTITUTION

Every Sunday, Beginning January 1, 1922

Newsdealers cannot return unsold copies of The Atlanta Constitution to their supply is limited strictly to the demand. To get Ray Stannard Baker's story, which is of monumental historic value and at the same time of unflinching human interest, it is necessary to order in advance.

In connection with Americanization work in Chicago, it is said that so many foreign women attended one of the schools to learn English, and brought their babies with them, that the school authorities sent out an emergency call for volunteer nurses.

Grand Theatre (Pictures and Vaudeville)—See advertising for program.
Howard Theatre—All week, "A Connecticut Yankee," and other screen features.

"The Broadway Whirl."
(Coming to the Atlanta.)
Blanche Ring, Charles Winninger, Winona Winter and Jay Gould are coming back to the Atlanta theatre Monday in the "Broadway Whirl," the musical revue which scored the most heavily of all the musical attractions in Atlanta several weeks ago.

Such a group of stars is a sure guarantee of just about as much fun and merriment and laughter as can be crowded into a single theatrical performance. But the "Whirl" has others besides these eminent comedians. There are Maxson and Brown and Nina Penn, whose dancing is a delight, and there are Virginia Birnbaum, Inez Courtney, Gertrude McDonald, in songs and specialties. Also there is the famous "Millionaires' Chorus," the most celebrated organization of gifted and beautiful young women ever brought together.

"Pep" is the middle name of "The Broadway Whirl." It fairly radiates pep, and this fact in addition to its stars at the head of the cast, with an ensemble remarkable for its freshness, pulchritude and vivacity, some decidedly new ideas and a splendid production, make "The Broadway Whirl" one of the most delightful and entertaining musical shows on tour. Only two matinees will be given during the week, a popular matinee on Monday and the regular matinee on Saturday. Seats for the week's engagement go on sale today.

Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Lyric.)
A tempting tidbit of tunelessness and terpsichore is "The Little Revue," featured at Keith's Lyric today, Friday and Saturday, with Al Garbell and three other principals, each splendidly capable singers and dancers. A special added feature to augment the holiday program is the team of Billy and Eddie Gorman, two of tenor ality's favorites song writers, who offer an accumulation of exclusive and popular numbers, including the "Topics of the Day" song, which has won so much comment.

Dainty Dorothy Manning and Larry Lee, in "Nothin' Serious," have a vehicle that fills fifteen minutes to the utmost with laugh-provoking nonsense and pleasing songs. They are both vocalists and instrumentalists and comely as well.

Loew Vaudeville.
(At the Grand.)
The midweek change of program at Loew's Grand theatre in effect today brings as its principal feature Fred LaReine, the world's foremost electrical wizard in an interesting exhibition of electrical experiments. The act is full of comedy and promises to be a sure cure for the bluest kind of blues. Jimmy Lyons, the soldier ambassador.

"The Fall of Babylon."
(At the Forsyth.)
The audiences attending the Forsyth theatre this week to see D. W. Griffith's master photo-drama "The Fall of Babylon," leave there with the impression that they have witnessed one of the greatest of moving picture productions and a true reproduction of a historical event.

Constance Talmadge, who has the lead in this supreme production, is at her best and she can easily lay her hand on the ladder of success in motion pictures to the efforts of D. W. Griffith.

"The Son of Wallingford."
(At the Forsyth.)
The big Vitaphone special production, "The Son of Wallingford," has been booked at the Tudor theatre for next week. This production was written and directed by Lillian and George Rankin Chester, creator of the famous vagabond, J. Ruffalo Wallingford, and his partner, Blackie Day. So famous have these characters of fiction become that their names are household words.
